Multinomial Naive Bayes: Feature vectors represent the frequencies with which certain events have been generated by a multinomial distribution. This is the event model typically used for document classification. Bernoulli Naive Bayes: In the multivariate Bernoulli event model, features are independent booleans (binary variables) describing ...

Naive Bayes Classifiers - GeeksforGeeks
Being Naive. So here comes the Naive part: we assume that every word in a sentence is independent of the other ones. This means that we're no longer looking at entire sentences, but rather at individual words. So for our purposes, "this was a fun party" is the same as "this party was fun" and "party fun was this".

1.9.4. Bernoulli Naive Bayes#. BernoulliNB implements the naive Bayes training and classification algorithms for data that is distributed according to multivariate Bernoulli distributions: i.e., there may be multiple features but each one is assumed to be a binary-valued (Bernoulli, boolean) variable. Therefore, this class requires samples to be represented as binary-valued feature vectors ...
