Main article: Starchild skull
In the late 1990s, Pye obtained a curiously shaped skull from a couple in El Paso, Texas that he believed was an alien-human hybrid. DNA tests show that the skull is from a human male. American clinical neurologist Steven Novella has said the skull belongs to a child who suffered from hydrocephalus.

Lloyd Pye -

Wikipedia

Over eight years of scientific testing strongly suggest that an ancient skull found in Mexico nearly eight decades ago is something other than entirely human. In fact, the skull known as the “Starchild” might well prove to be the first biological relic confirmed by DNA testing to be a human-alien hybrid.

The Star Child Skull: Out of this World

The Starchild Skull was allegedly found in a mine or cave near Delicias, southeast of Chihuahua. So much of the hub-bub surrounding the Starchild Skull focused on its bizarre appearance and the hypothesis of his other-worldly beginnings. It's surprising that no one has applied Occam's
